

If you air "Stolen Honor" I will boycott your station and any of it's advertisers forever. If you do air it, in the interest of fairness, you must air "Going Upriver: The Long War of John Kerry". But, you folks aren't concerned about fairness, are you? You are just looking for the easiest way to pay your own pockets and think Bush is the man to help you do it. Get real. With the possible exception of the owner of Sinclair, the rest of you are all pawns in the grand scheme of the New World Order and you will fall by the wayside with the rest of the citizenry. And if you don't think so, you are truly too stupid to hold responsible positions and I will take great care to never receive input from any of your organizations.

Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to force their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election is a clear example of the dangers of media consolidation.

Sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge, and is obligated by law to serve the public interest. But when large companies control the airwaves, we get more of what's good for the bottom line and less of what we need for our democracy. Instead of something produced at "News Central" far away, it's more important that we see real people from our own communities and more substantive news about issues that matter.

Sinclair's actions show why we need to strengthen media ownership rules, not weaken them. They show why the license renewal process needs to involve more than a returned postcard. Thank you.
